TORRID TAMPICO

There's a hot time in Tampico all the time—but just now things are hotter than ever in this seething boom-town of the great Mexican oil fields. Tampico is the Dawson City of a tropical Klondyke—where the bonanzas are in the form of oil instead of gold. But today oil is more essential than gold and the eyes of the oil-consuming modern world are turned toward Tampico where the greatest gushers are pouring their precious floods into the pipe-lines of the many great and rival companies.

The town itself has become suddenly a city with its tall buildings and other American features that make it look like a stranger-city in its own Mexican country. A look at Tampico as it is today will astonish and interest every thoughtful "gringo" of the U. S. A.
